

Antwerp City Council

The iconic Antwerp City Hall, a testament to history since 1565, has undergone a remarkable metamorphosis, seamlessly weaving modern technology into its enduring grandeur. Within this historic embrace, the council chamber has undergone a significant rejuvenation, prioritizing functionality while preserving its heritage charm. The newly configured U-shaped layout fosters enhanced dialogue between the city council and the board, a refreshing interpretation of the space's original purpose.

Choosing technology that complemented the city hall's unique character was paramount. After a thorough market analysis, the city of Antwerp selected Televic's uniCOS conference units, renowned for their sleek design, user-friendliness, and support for hybrid meetings. The uniCOS units not only illuminate the council chamber. Their intuitive controls and centralized management system, accessible from the control desk positioned at the heart of the chamber, simplify navigation and ensure seamless operation.

A notable aspect of the technology installation is its ability to alleviate stress during council meetings. The intelligent cameras automatically track the speaker, eliminating the need for manual adjustments. Additionally, customizable presets, such as for oath-taking ceremonies, run entirely autonomously. This innovative approach reduces the burden of technology management, allowing participants to focus on the discussions at hand.

To ensure a solution that complemented Antwerp's historic setting, Axians, the system integrator responsible for this feat, collaborated with Televic to create a custom system that blended seamlessly with the city hall's architecture. For council chamber users, the new system is extremely user-friendly, allowing participants to choose the content they want to see and ensuring a smooth flow of discussions through its speaker queue system. Exceptional sound quality, achieved through individual speakers strategically placed throughout the chamber, further enhances the user experience.

The council chamber of Antwerp's city hall stands as a testament to the successful fusion of history and modernity.
